AIR SUPPORT REPORT

0119/162 HEADQUARTERS, V AMPHIBIOUS CORPS,
C/O FLEET POST OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO.

CONFIDENTIAL 30 November 1945.

From: The Air Officer.
To : The Commanding General.

Subject: Air Operations Report, Occupation of JAPAN.

1. Introduction:

a. Air Support, as regards availability of aircraft, construction of airfields, close support, pre-bombardment missions and strategic bombing, was divided into two definite planning stages, the first of Assault and the second of Occupation. In planning for the assault on JAPAN, the services of land-based aircraft for strategic and deep support missions, as well as eight CVEs for direct close support (with a total of approximately 240 carrier aircraft), were to be made available to this Corps. For the actual occupation of JAPAN, land-based aircraft for support missions, as might be required, were kept on call, as was one CVE with 30 aircraft.

b. Although available, air support, other than that furnished by OY and Army transport aircraft, was not required. In the early stages of occupation, several requests for DDT spraying, air-evacuation, and air-delivery were submitted to the SIXTH Army. The necessity for transmitting such requests through a lengthy chain of command resulted in very few of such requests being complied with.

2. Assault Plans For Southern KYUSHU:

a. Planning:

(1) During the planning phase for the assault on JAPAN, requests were submitted to higher headquarters covering aviation requirements of V Amphibious Corps. Some requests called for a general application of preliminary area bombardment and deep support missions. Other more detailed requests outlined direct support requirements, which defined specific areas and schedules of attack, and numbers and types of aircraft.

(2) Requirements forwarded to higher echelons included maintaining tactical air observers and artillery air spotters from all committed divisions and from Corps on station during daylight hours, with one tactical observer from V Amphibious Corps on station during the hours of darkness for night heckling and night observation missions. Other requirements were for continuous photographic coverage, DDT spraying, smoke missions, propaganda leaflet drops, air-delivery, and VMO employment.

(3) For the assault, land-based aircraft were to provide pre-aerial bombardment, strategic and deep support missions, while carrier-based planes from the eight CVEs assigned to V Amphibious Corps were to provide all direct support missions until such time as adequate land-based aircraft would be available on the target. The air plan for the assault on JAPAN, however, was never completed, and all requests to higher headquarters were later modified to conform to requirements for the occupation phase.

(4) Two units assigned to Corps to assist in air operations were: (a) Landing Force Air Support Control Unit #4, assigned as the direct air support control unit for this Corps, was scheduled to relieve CASCU afloat as soon as LFASCU could be established ashore, the latter then to control all direct support aircraft in the Corps zone. (b) Marine Observation Group One, as a central administrative control for all VMO employment, was scheduled to maintain operational control of all OY strips in the V Amphibious Corps zone of responsibility.

(5) In the assault plan, arrangements were made for an OY strip to be constructed initially on KOSHIKI RETTO by the 40th InfDiv who was to take those islands in preliminary landings, to provide employment of organic aircraft of the Corps units landing on KYUSHU as soon as practicable.

(6) For movement to the target, LFASCU #4 and MOG-1 were to lift in Corps shipping. Sixteen OY-1s in fly-away condition, four from each division and Corps Artillery, were to be loaded in supporting CVEs for use as soon as the first OY strip was operational. It was planned to stage the remaining OYs to OKINAWA for subsequent flight to KYUSHU. Remaining personnel and equipment of VMO squadrons were to lift in unit shipping. A total of 40 air observers and air-spotters were to be embarked in CVEs for initial operations in carrier-based aircraft until such time as ordered ashore in OY or carrier aircraft.

b. Training:

(1) During the rehabilitation and training period between the IWO JIMA Campaign and the planned assault on JAPAN, continuous air and ground training was conducted by air liaison parties, tactical air observers, and artillery air spotters of the divisions attached to Corps, LFASCU #4, MOG-1, attached VMO Squadrons, and the

CONFIDENTIAL

Corps Air Delivery Section. Air strike groups which were to participate in the assault on JAPAN were not available for joint training.

(2) A rehearsal for the assault was scheduled for 16, 17 and 18 October in the MARIANAS, to include all of the direct air-support air and ground units. This of course, was not conducted.

c. Organization:

LFASCU #4 as air support control unit for Corps, and MOG-1 as a central administrative control for all VMO employment, were attached to V Amphibious Corps for the assault. It was planned that the Air Section of V Amphibious Corps would operate in conjunction with the Corps Supporting Arms Center, and a request was made for additional officer personnel to enable 24-hour watch standing.

d. Operations:

Air operations for the assault on JAPAN, up to the cessation of hostilities, were generally as planned. During and after the capture of OKINAWA, land-based and carrier-based air attacks were directed against KYUSHU with increasing frequency and strength.

e. Supply:

VMO squadrons, LFASCU #4, and MOG-1 were to be supplied by organic units, with automatic resupply fulfilling later needs. Corps and divisions were to provide messing, medical, communication and security facilities for LFASCU #4, MOG-1 and attached VMO squadrons.

3. The Occupation of JAPAN:

a. Planning:

(1) As in the assault, during the planning phase of the occupation of JAPAN all requests for air support desired by V Amphibious Corps were submitted to higher echelons. Air support requests and plans for the occupation were substantially the same as those for the assault; the modifications being fewer aircraft, and a change from an "on station" to an "on call" status for all supporting aircraft. The availability of both land-based and carrier-based aircraft was reduced in proportion to the estimated requirements of the occupation. Land-based aircraft were to provide pre-aerial bombardment, strategic and deep support missions if required, with carrier-based planes from three CVEs to provide all direct support missions until such time as adequate land-based aircraft would be available at the target.

(2) Air support requirements, as forwarded to higher echelons for approval, included; (a) Maintenance in carrier aircraft on call of Corps and Division tactical air observers and artillery air spotters; (b) Photographic, DDT spray, smoke and air-delivery missions; (c) The early employment of VMO aircraft after establishment of occupation forces ashore. No requests were made for night observation or night heckling.

(3) As was planned for the assault, LFASCU #4 was scheduled to relieve CASCU afloat as soon as LFASCU was established ashore, the latter then to control all direct support aircraft. MOG-1 in addition to exercising administrative control for all VMO employment, was to maintain operational control of the OY strip at SASEBO to serve Corps Headquarters.

(4) For movement to the target, LFASCU #4, MOG-1, and VMO squadrons with OY aircraft of the committed divisions were to lift in unit shipping. All air observers and air spotters were to lift in unit shipping to SAIPAN, with sixteen observers disembarking there for further transportation to supporting CVEs in the target area. The remaining air observers and spotters were to continue to the target in unit shipping.

b. Training:

During the short period between initial planning for the occupation of JAPAN and movement to the target, little training was conducted in any phase of air-support. No rehearsals were scheduled for the occupation phase.

c. Organization:

Air support organization was much the same as set up for the assault, with LFASCU #4, MOG-1 and the VMO squadrons attached to Corps and organic units. In the occupation phase, the Air section of V Amphibious Corps did not operate in a Corps Supporting Arms Center.

d. Operations:

(1) Air operations for the occupation of JAPAN were generally as planned. With some compromise, all V Amphibious

CONFIDENTIAL

Corps requests for air support were included in ComPhibsPac Air Plan. In view of meager requirements for air support, as directed by the situation ashore in JAPAN, this air plan was considered adequate and satisfactory. Air support for the occupation was divided into maintaining surveillance and a show of force over KYUSHU, and direct air support for V Amphibious Corps as required. Fast Carrier Task Groups and Fleet Air Wings were available for surveillance, a show of force, search and reconnaissance, and to assist in providing air cover for movement of the occupation forces. U. S. Army Strategic Air Forces and Far Eastern Air Force were theoretically available for general surveillance and a show of force, and to render active support as required.

(2) One CVE was assigned to Amphibious Group Four for air cover during the occupation. This CVE was prepared to provide limited assistance during initial landings and thereafter. However, no direct air support was employed by V Amphibious Corps for the initial occupation, other than the employment of CY aircraft after establishment of V Amphibious Corps ashore. No requests were submitted initially for direct air support, but in the later stages of the occupation requests for DDT spraying, air-evacuation, and air-delivery drop were made. However, these requests were filled only in part and with fair results. Shortly after arrival at target, requests were initiated by V Amphibious Corps to SIXTH Army requesting immediate air DDT spraying of areas to be inhabited by occupation troops. Requests initiated included necessary spraying aircraft and proper DDT spray. V Amphibious Corps requests were forwarded by the SIXTH Army, and eventually two R4Ds were dispatched from the PHILIPPINE area, arriving at target approximately 21 days after the initial request was submitted. One spraying was completed, however, with fair results. In the later stages of the occupation, requests were made to SIXTH Army and 5th Fighter Command for evacuation of hospitalized personnel. Again, there was the customary confusion and delay, with instances of air-transportation arriving unannounced several days after patients had already been evacuated by other means.

(3) Control of air support by V Amphibious Corps was initially through ComASCU 9, PhibGroup 4, and through LFASCU #4 on A plus 3. Air support for this Corps was subsequently taken over by the Fifth Air Force.

(4) VMO aircraft were employed for regular courier service, evacuation, reconnaissance, and surveillance throughout the V Amphibious Corps zone of responsibility.

CONFIDENTIAL

(5) Japanese airfields on KYUSHU were reconnoitered and their serviceability reported.

(6) Courier air transportation throughout JAPAN was made available immediately by the Navy (seaplanes) and subsequently by the Army (landplanes).

(7) Certain Japanese aircraft were readied by TAIU and flown to SCAP for air-intelligence use.

(8) V Amphibious Corps maintained close liaison with all air units and operational airfields in zone of responsibility.

(9) During the stages of disposition, all Japanese aircraft and aircraft materials in V Amphibious Corps zone of responsibility not required by Technical Air Intelligence Units or for technical use by other service units were destroyed.

(10) In line with information on the subject received from SIXTH Army, this Corps, shortly after arrival at the target, initiated a request to SIXTH Army Headquarters for the assignment to V Amphibious Corps of one JRB and one R4D to be used for evacuation, courier service, and administrative traffic. Again, as was the case with requests for DDT spray and air-evacuation, numerous dispatches among various Army commands stemmed from V Amphibious Corps' initial request, but with no definite results. After receiving ten dispatches concerning these aircraft, one R4D finally arrived at MAB, OMURA, sixty-two days after submission of the initial dispatch request.

(11) Air observers were lifted to target in unit shipping and were not available for any operations prior to landing. However, they subsequently have operated with the VMO squadrons to a limited extent.

(12) Marine Air Group 22 with three VMF squadrons and one VMF(N) squadron under operational control of the 5th Fleet, based at OMURA, JAPAN, commencing 20 September. This unit was to provide air support for V Amphibious Corps. However, such air support was never required and, in early November, MAG 22 was withdrawn from JAPAN. Upon withdrawal of this Group, however, authority was requested, and duly granted by Air Fleet Marine Force Pacific, to organize a provisional base air detachment of 8 officers and 70 enlisted, in order to retain OMURA in commission as a Marine Air Base, pending reduction of air-transportation and utility demands in western and central KYUSHU, which OMURA was ideally located to serve. As of the closing date of this report, MAB, OMURA, remains in commission, and has rendered great assistance in the logistic and air support of this Corps.

e. Supply:

VMO squadrons, LFASCU #4, and MOG-1 were supplied by organic units. Initially, there was a decided shortage of the proper type of aviation fuel and oil for VMO aircraft. However, during the later stages of V Amphibious Corps occupation, such fuel has been made available to all squadrons in ample quantities, but to date the much-needed low viscosity oil has not been received.

4. Conclusions:

a. Air support, although available on call, was not employed by the Corps prior to landing in JAPAN.

b. Carrier-based aircraft available for the assault were insufficient in number.

c. Seaplane courier service, the only type of air support furnished by the Navy subsequent to the occupation, was satisfactory.

d. Air support of the Corps furnished by the Army was unsatisfactory during the initial phases of the occupation. This was due to lack of availability of Army aircraft for special flights, to the extreme irregularity of the Army Air Courier Service, and to poor communication facilities. Subsequently these conditions improved considerably, although it was 28 November before an airplane was assigned directly to VAC by the Army.

3. VMO squadrons proved invaluable in making possible early and continuous courier communications - mail and personnel - throughout the V Amphibious Corps zone of responsibility. The ability of the OY airplane to operate from reasonably small fields permitted a rapid and continuous liaison with all major units as they fanned out from their respective base headquarters. In addition, medical evacuation within the V Amphibious Corps zone of responsibility was provided by OY aircraft, although larger aircraft would have been more suitable for long hauls.

f. The most noticeable deficiency of air support during the occupation phase was the lack of any transport and/or cargo aircraft assigned directly to the operational control of V Amphibious Corps. Numerous calls for air transportation of personnel and material, to include air evacuation of medical patients, arose from time to time which could be filled only by special aircraft kept on call for just such purpose. Even the SIXTH Army requested V Amphibious Corps to furnish air transport service. Minimum requirements to carry out these very important missions is one R4D airplane each for Corps and Division headquarters. Too much stress cannot be placed upon the necessity for providing each of these units, Corps included, initially with a squadron of small aircraft of the "Cub" type, and later, as large airfields become available, with one or more transport and/or cargo type airplanes for administrative operations.

REPATRIATION REPORT

HEADQUARTERS, V AMPHIBIOUS CORPS,
C/O FLEET POST OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO.

CONFIDENTIAL 30 November 1945.

From: The Repatriation Officer, G-3 Section.
To : The Commanding General.

Subject: Repatriation Operations Report, Occupation of JAPAN.

1. When the V Amphibious Corps landed in JAPAN on 22 September 1945, no concrete plans for repatriation existed, but on that day V Amphibious Corps was designated by SIXTH Army to receive from Commander 7th Amphibious Force disarmed Japanese demobilized troop repatriates, and SASEBO was designated as a port to receive and process incoming Japanese arriving from overseas in U. S. LSTs. This represented the initial extent of repatriation plans and planning.

Because repatriation would involve the movement of large numbers of persons by foot, train and by ship, as well as the detail and organization of guards and supervisory teams, repatriation seemed more nearly a proper function of G-3 than of any other staff section. Consequently the G-3 section was assigned overall responsibility for supervision and planning in connection with repatriation throughout the Corps zone. It is interesting to note that, as an indication of the differing conceptions of staff responsibility in the various Headquarters when confronted by a totally new problem, repatriation was considered as a function of G-3 in 5th Marine Division, G-2 in the 2d Marine Division, G-1 and G-3 in the 32d Infantry Division, and as a function of the Military Government Section in the SIXTH Army. However, liaison and coordination between this Headquarters and both higher and lower echelons was excellent and continuous.

From the initial stages of occupation, in accordance with directives from SCAP to the Imperial Japanese Government, actual execution of repatriation was made the direct responsibility of Japanese authorities. These directives were likewise promulgated to V Amphibious Corps by dispatch and letter, in order that the necessary close supervision could be properly maintained. Unfortunately, many such directives reached this Headquarters a matter of weeks after they had been delivered to the Japanese authorities, so that on occasion our first information concerning some new detail of repatriation came from Japanese sources.

Soon after initial landings, investigation disclosed that the Japanese had commenced repatriation of Japanese from KOREA, and Koreans back to KOREA, using the port of HAKATA with MOJI-SHIMONOSEKI as a receiving and holding area. Small craft were principally employed, and processing centers, records, sanitation, and so forth were conspicuous by their absence. Confronted by the first incoming groups of Japanese, the 5th Marine Division at SASEBO set up a repatriation center at URAGASHIRA and shortly after 26 September were receiving and processing nearly 3,000 incoming Japanese demobilized troops per day. HAKATA and the receiving area at MOJI-SHIMONOSEKI were soon operating under supervision of occupation forces, and repatriation plans began to take definite shape. The ports of MOJI and SHIMONOSEKI were not authorized for repatriation shipping due to heavily mined waters in that area. SCAP issued comprehensive directives to the Imperial Japanese Government covering repatriation centers, limitations on currency brought in and out of JAPAN by repatriates, necessary medical inspections, sanitation, minimum food requirements, etc., and estimates were compiled as to the total number of Koreans and Chinese in the islands of JAPAN. Best information indicated well over a million Koreans in JAPAN to be repatriated, and immediately action was initiated to set up additional repatriation ports and processing centers, as well as to increase the daily capacity of those already in operation, where such increase was possible. After investigation, the use of SENZAKI, HAKATA, SASEBO and KAGOSHIMA as repatriation ports was determined, and the Japanese instructed to improve existing facilities and provide new ones as indicated. Meantime, SCAJAP was organized in TOKYO to authorize and control the use and movement of specified Japanese shipping to be employed in repatriation shuttles, and every effort was made to increase shipping space, which fell far short of the established capacities of the repatriation ports. Maximum daily capacities of these ports and their repatriation centers were established as follows:-

	IN	OUT	TOTAL
SENZAKI	2,500	2,500	5,000
HAKATA	5,000	5,000	10,000
SASEBO	3,000	3,000	6,000
KAGOSHIMA	3,000	3,000	6,000
	13,500	13,500	32,000

In addition to Korean repatriates and incoming Japanese, it was found that there were some 40,000 Chinese Nationals of which about 6,000 were in Corps zone, approximately 2,000 Formosan Nationals and 15,000 RYUKYU islanders also in the V Amphibious Corps zone. Higher headquarters advised that the Formosans and RYUKYU islanders (who were demobilized soldiers which constituted one half the number) could not be repatriated until some future date, but authority was received to repatriate Chinese. This movement of Chinese commenced in early October from HAKATA, using Japanese shipping, and it was found necessary to place U. S. guard detachments on many ships in order to maintain some semblance of order. Of all the repatriates involved, the Chinese caused most difficulty, rioting, looting, and in some cases killing. The Japanese authorities were helpless when it came to handling Chinese, and careful supevision and firm action was necessary on the part of occupation troops. The Koreans were, on the contrary, docile and relatively quiet, and gave little trouble, with the exception of their constant drift out of nowhere into the repatriation centers and their total lack of any elementary concept of individual or collective sanitation.

2. By 30 October, the Japanese Government had placed the Prefectural Governors in charge of the overall problems of repatriation in their areas, directly under the Ministry of Welfare. A representative of the Ministry of Welfare was appointed to operate at each repatriation center, under the Prefectural Governor, and occupation force supervisory teams at these centers maintained liaison with the Japanese and close supervision of Japanese repatriation activities.

Reports that they were to be repatriated spread rapidly among the Korean nationals, and they began streaming into the Corps zone by any and all means available. The Japanese officials were directed to control this influx, but it was simply a matter of too many people and too few ships. Processing center facilities were strained far beyond capacity, and sanitary conditions were for a time virtually non-existent, and this among a people accustomed to extremely primitive living and sanitary conditions. A black market developed in food, as well as shipping, and repatriation centers with a capacity of 10,000 were forced to attempt to handle as many as 30,000 waiting repatriates. As it became apparent that the Japanese were entirely unable to curtail this flow of people, SIXTH Army was urgently requested in early November to institute rigid controls on movements through HONSHU to the Corps zone, until the ports could be cleared. This was done, and restrictions imposed, these restrictions to expire on 24 November.

During this hiatus, V Amphibious Corps was able to move out the majority of the many thousands awaiting repatriation, while SCAP proposed and placed into effect a plan to make more shipping available, so that the numbers of persons moved in and out of designated port areas more nearly approached the capacity of the repatriation centers concerned.

Basically the plan called for the use of some 80 LSTs, to shuttle from CHINA to SASEBO with Japanese repatriates, and to outload Chinese or Koreans from SASEBO; and to use KAGOSHIMA in the same manner. This plan was approved, and on 24 November the first repatriates departed, some 2,800 Chinese, from SASEBO. The use of KAGOSHIMA however, was delayed until after the closing date of this report. Some additional Japanese ships were authorized to operate in the repatriation shuttles, and in general it was found that the increased shipping space more nearly kept up with the actual flow of repatriates into V Amphibious Corps ports from the other areas in JAPAN.

During the period between 22 September and 30 November, over 570,000 Japanese repatriates returned to JAPAN through V Amphibious Corps ports, and over 300,000 repatriates were moved out of JAPAN. Repatriation into JAPAN will undoubtedly be a continuing program for many months, because of the large numbers in CHINA and the Pacific islands at the close of the war. However, reports indicate that the repatriation of Chinese nationals will be virtually complete by the middle of December, and that another four months will see the return of the great majority of Koreans now in JAPAN.

3. Our Operations for the Period:
a. V Amphibious Corps in execution of missions assigned at 1600I, initiated seizure of SHIMONOSEKI and FUKUOKA branches of Bank of Chosen. Leading elements of FUKUOKA Occupation Force cleared SASEBO by rail at 0830I; by road at 0830I; last elements arrived FUKUOKA at 1730I. CG, FUKUOKA Occupation Force opened his CP in Eastern part of that place at 1445I. CGs, 2d and 5th Marine Divisions, were directed to investigate the feasability of stowing breechblocks of demilitarized fixed weapons in separated areas under guard.

b. 5th Marine Division conducted further patrols and posted guards in assigned areas. 5th ASCO and 3d Plat, Co B, 12th MT Bn, were attached to FUKUOKA Occupation Force. 4th Bn, 13th Marines completed movement to bivouac at (61.5-11.0).

Road, and air reconnaissance of routes to KUMAMOTO were undertaken at 1000I by elements of the division Reconnaissance Company and by OY airplane. Air reconnaissance indicates that field East of KUMAMOTO can accomodate aircraft up to R4D types and that road net will accomodate 2½ ton trucks between ISAHAYA and KUMAMOTO.

G-3 OPERATION REPORT

From: 1800I 30 September 1945,
To : 1800I 1 October 1945.

No. 37

Map: No change.

1. Location of Troops:
See Location Statement No. 8.

2. Weather and Visibility:
a. SASEBO
Initially overcast and hazy, with steady rain, which lifted as the period ended. Surface winds, northwesterly; force, 8-12 knots. Sea, smooth, with medium swells.

b. NAGASAKI
Low overcast at 1,000 feet, visibility 6-8 miles, except 1-2 miles in rain. Surface wind, South, shifting to North; force 20-25 knots. Medium swells.

c. FUKUOKA
Cloudy, slight precipitation with limited visibility. Surface winds, northwesterly; force, 4-5 knots. Light swells.

3. Our Operations for the Period:
a. V Amphibious Corps at 2037I requested CTF 55 for an early decision as to availability of FUKUOKA harbor for transfer and support of units for FUKUOKA-SHIMONOSEKI, in view of impossibility of effecting such operations overland from SASEBO. At 1030I, warning orders were issued to 5th Marine Division to initiate organization of SHIMONOSEKI Occupation Group consisting of one rifle company (reinforced) with certain Corps attachments prepared to proceed to that place via FUKUOKA by 4 October. At 1214I, FUKUOKA Occupation Force was directed to seize Bank of CHOSEN branches at MOJI and FUKUOKA as directed by 6th Army K1ØØ72. At 1300I, one telephone-trunk opened for service between this Headquarters and Headquarters, FUKUOKA Occupation Force. All Corps units were directed to report any known instance of surrendered equipment or dumps not properly safeguarded. 5th Marine Division at 1500I was granted authority to shift civilian supplies of dynamite in the AINOURA area to military munition dumps for increased security against sabotage. At 1700I, a liaison party of Corps staff-representatives departed from MAB, OMURA, for KANOYA, arriving at 1750I.

b. 5th Marine Division reinforced OMURA Occupation Group with one rifle platoon from 27th Marines, and continued patrolling and inventory of enemy material and supplies in zone of responsibility.

(b) Central KYUSHU:

Overcast with warm, heavy haze gradually lifting toward end of period. Surface winds, northerly; force, 8-12 knots. Sea, calm.

3. Our Operations for the Period:

(a) V Amphibious Corps continued assigned missions in zone of responsibility. Pursuant to instructions contained in SIXTH Army dispatch KX 10406, directed continued search by all units for valuable items and funds as specified. All units were directed to eliminate all hazardous training, consistent with current missions. FUKUOKA Occupation Force was directed to impound some 4,000 bags of Japanese outgoing overseas mail at MOJI, SHIMONOSEKI and FUKUOKA, and hold same for screening as directed by instructions from SIXTH Army.

(b) 5th Marine Division dispatched 1st Bn, 13th Marines, to KAWATANA by road; at 1600I Bn CP opened at (92.9-01.6). At 1400I, the advance party of BLT 2/27 at SAGA sent a 40-man patrol to TOSU (50.8-40.05) to quell a reported outbreak of disorder and looting by Chinese POW's. Upon arrival, local civil chief of police reported that Chinese "looting" had consisted of purchasing clothing without Japanese ration-board credentials. No other evidences of disturbance were found, and Chinese had already left.

(c) 2d Marine Division dispatched advance elements of BLT 2/8 and 3/8 by rail from ISAHAYA to KUMAMOTO at 0650I; party arrived without incident at 1238I. CP of BLT 2/8 opened in KUMAMOTO at (80.25-70.40) in the former Military Academy. Co B, 8th Marines (Reinf), assumed control of Chinese POW camps at OMUTA. 8th Marines (Reinf) relieved U. S. POW recovery teams 22, 24, 33 and 39 at OMUTA.

(d) 32d Infantry Division continued loading. Delayed reports indicate that CP of RCT 126 opened afloat in USS FOND DU LAC (APA 166) at 1630I, 5 October and that CP of RCT 127 opened afloat in USS GRAFTON (APA 109) at 1200I, 6 October; both CP's closed ashore at the same times.

(e) FUKUOKA Occupation Force established guards over Chinese POW camps at IIZUKA (70.4-70.4) with elements of RCT 28. At 0800I, control of BLT 1/28 reverted to RCT 28. SHIMONOSEKI and MOJI Occupation Groups continued surveillance and guarding of public buildings and intelligence targets in their areas. SOME airfield, 10 miles Southeast of MOJI, can definitely accomodate aircraft to include R4D types.

1. Location of Troops:

See Location Statement No. 22.

2. Weather and Visibility:

a. Northern KYUSHU:

Light overcast, visibility, 10 miles. Surface winds, northwesterly, 3-5 knots. Sea, calm.

b. Central KYUSHU:

Clear and cool, visibility 8-10 miles. Surface winds, northwesterly, 12-14 knots. Sea, choppy.

3. Our Operations for the Period:

a. V Amphibious Corps continued assigned missions in zone of responsibility. 5th Marine Division was directed to designate and alert reinforcing elements for attachment to 26th Marines (Reinf) prior to oversea movement to PELELIU; 2d Marine Division was directed to alert 6th Marines (Reinf) for movement by water to SASEBO on short notice. At 1115I, passed instructions to CO, CUB-1, to ensure compliance by all Naval armed-guard detachments present with directions contained in CINCAFPAC ZX 4765 relative to jettisoning of ammunition from merchantmen. Directed the FUKUOKA Occupation Force to dispatch a supervisory detachment to HIROHATA with [illegible] delay.

b. 5th Marine Division alerted 26th Marines (Reinf) to be prepared to embark for oversea movement on short notice. At 2055I, debarkation of Japanese repatriated soldiers was completed without incident; a total of 9,956 had been processed through, 20 hospitalized, and 3 died enroute. At 1115I reported to VAC that the harbor of KARATSU (302-148) does not contain suitable areas for landing LST's or LSM's, though adjacent beaches in vicinity of MYOKEN will accomodate such craft after clearance of wrecked craft currently fouling approaches and shoreline.

c. 2d Marine Division conducted routine patrolling east of NAGASAKI to the coastline. 10th Marines patrolled to SHIMABARA and KOJIRO (335-079).

d. 32d Infantry Division continued unloading at SASEBO. Division advance billeting party arrived by rail at KOKURA at 2230I, and at SHIMONOSEKI at 0130I. BLT 1/128 at 0800I commenced movement by road and rail to FUKUOKA in three serials, the first of which arrived without incident at 1530I.

e. FUKUOKA Occupation Force posted guards over WAC radio relay-station at ABURA-YAMA. 28th Marines (Reinf) despatched a billeting-party to KUROKI at 0800I; party arrived without incident at 0940I. CO, YAMAGUCHI Detachment returned from SENZAKI at 2245I. He reports much seaborne traffic shifted to SENZAKI as a result of our mines. SENZAKI has received some 110,000 repatriated Japanese since the end of the war, whereas approximately 90,000 Koreans are reported to have passed through SENZAKI enroute home. Overland transportation to that place remains extremely difficult, and port facilities are poor.

c. Southern KYUSHU:

Clear and warm, visibility, 8-10 miles. Surface winds, east to northeasterly, 7-9 knots.

3. Our Operations for the Period:

a. V Amphibious Corps continued assigned missions in zone of responsibility. At 1800I, 16 October, directed 2d and 5th Marine Divisions, and FUKUOKA and KAGOYA Occupation Forces, to maintain all Chinese POW's in their present camps, using such military surveillance as necessary, pending arrangements for repatriation. At 1319I, directed 2d Marine Division to cancel the ready status of 6th Marines (Reinf) for movement by water to SASEBO. At 1419I, 5th Marine Division was directed to proceed with destruction (by Japanese, under U.S. supervision) of suicide and PT boats at OGUSHI.

b. 5th Marine Division continued routine patrolling and surveillance. SAGA Occupation Group despatched patrols to KARATSU and TOSU (15 miles NE of SAGA), and to KARATSU and SETAKA (12 miles SE of SAGA). OITA Occupation Group patrolled to BEPPU. All patrols were completed without incident.

c. 2d Marine Division initiated movement of elements of the division reconnaissance company to KUMAMOTO, leading section arriving by rail at 1430I, 2d Marines (Reinf) patrolled without incident to OMUTA and HAKIMISAKI (12 miles S of NAGASAKI). 10th Marines established an outpost-detachment at SHIMABARA (30 miles E of NAGASAKI), and patrolled without incident to KOHAMA (19 miles E of NAGASAKI) and KUCHINOTSU (20 miles E by S of NAGASAKI).

d. 32d Infantry Division continued unloading. USS SHELBY (APA 195) and CUSTER (APA 49) are now completely unloaded. At end of period, elements of division headquarters and of 32d QM Co had commenced unloading, and at 1313I, 16 October, division opened an advance CP and message-center in Military Government Building, SASEBO, 2d Bn, Serv Co, and elements of regimental headquarters, 128th Infantry (Reinf), and Co C, 107th Med Bn, initiated movement from SASEBO to SHIMONOSEKI by rail in three serials, clearing respectively 0800, 1200I, and 1600I. First serial arrived without incident at 1535I.

e. FUKUOKA Occupation Force continued processing and surveillance of prisons throughout zone. Co D, 3d MP Bn, cleared FUKUOKA by rail at 0800I, and arrived at SHIMONOSEKI at 1030I. Efforts are continuing to get SASEBO detachment through, but heavy washouts still impede progress. At 2353I, 3d Band Sec, 5th Marine Division, arrived at FUKUOKA by rail and were billeted in East Park area. Throughout the period, a considerable bottleneck of northbound motor transportation built up at MOJI, due to present necessity of routing vehicles through KANMON Tunnels instead of across Straits of SHIMONOSEKI, which are still mined.

f. KANOYA Occupation Force patrolled without incident to MIYAKONOJO (29 miles NE of KANOYA) and KAGOSHIMA.
