Bert C. Fuller reports that while he was at Corregidor he did radio repair work and at one time Japs brought in five Model TCO Navy radio telephones. He was ordered to build a radio transmitter for Ft. Drum and what the Japs wanted was about a 20-watt transmitter to reach from Ft. Drum to Corregidor. They brought several Japanese field transmitters for him to repair the filter condensers.

(3-45) 1.

SECRET

Bert C. Fuller reports that men who worked for him on Luzon informed him that Japs had Americans working at Clark Field. They labored between air raids, repairing bomb damage and washing out gasoline drums. They were housed in little shacks set in between stacks of gasoline drums, near oil storages on all the fields.

SECRET

Bert C. Fuller states that Japs moved all prisoners from Ft. Huches, Caballo Island and took them by boat to Cabcaben, Bataan where they were unloaded into chest-deep water and forced to wade to the shore.

(3-45) 1.

SECRET

Fuller states that at time of surrender at Caballo Island that Japs searched all Americans and jewelry, money, some clothing, pictures, letters, fountain pens, pencils etc were taken from Ps/W. If they did not find anything on Ps/W they slapped or kicked them. Many were hit on head with rifles. The 900 Ps/W taken at Ft. Hughes were mostly Navy, 100 Army and about 85 Marines. They were kept in stockade for 3 days with no food. On third day in the evening, the men were fed some canned milk, captured from American forces.

(3-45) 1.

SECRET

Bert C. Fuller states that at Ft. Hughes, Caballo Island some American Ps/W stole one case of prunes. 5 Americans stepped forward and confessed to the stealing to prevent the shooting of ten men chosen at random, the Jap lieutenant in charge beat each of the five over the head with a large stick.

(3-45) 1.

SECRET

Bert C. Fuller reports that Japs at Corregidor beat a Marine sergeant with a board which had a 20-penny spike at its end. The Jap tried his best to hit the Marines head but he threw up his arms to protect it and the blow fell on his lower arm breaking it.

(3-45) 1.

SECRET

Bert C. Fuller reports that a doctor in the Medical Corps believed to be Evans reported that while he was in Bilibid three boxes were brought in from Nichols Field and American doctors opened the boxes and discovered 3 American bodies battered beyond recognition. Their heads were beaten to a pulp, their arms were broken and their bodies were covered with black and blue bruises.

(3-45) 1.

SECRET

Bert C. Fuller reports that a Dr. Rillo reported to him that Japs gave Col. Howard and Major Straughn and 18 other Americans a trial at Ft. Santiago but they received no sentence. Some Filipinos were sentenced to 100 years for gerrilla activities. Subject believes the Americans all were executed.
