SUMMARY OF FACTS RELATIVE TO DEATH: Patient was admitted at 1600, November 21, 1942, in a morbund condition from the Yamamoto-Butai Detention Camp, Manila Port Terminal, Manila, P.I., where he had been working on a labor detail for the Japanese Authorities. The present illness began 11-18-42 with onset of chills and fever, diarrhea without blood, and "blood in urine" which quickly debilitated him. He became nauseated and vomited whatever he would eat.

3011 Garfield Drive, Rockford, Illinois.

RELATION: NAME AND ADDRESS OF NEXT OF KIN: SISTER: Ruth PEACH,

He gave a history of 18 years residence in the tropics. He was retired in 1940 and recalled to active duty in the Fleet Reserve a few months later, qualified for shore duty only because of his hypertension (160/90) and obesity (5*8", 238 lbs.).

He developed malaria in Bataan, P.I. in March 1942 and was treated there at the Army General Hospital #2. He was transferred to Manila and worked in the Port Area (6-13-42). He had minor recurrences of symptoms and took quinine irregularly. His worst recurrence came in August.

On admission he showed marked pallor, moderated jaundice, emaciation, dehydration, Temp. 101.F. (axillary), pulse 100, Resp. 25, but was clear mentally and had remarkable strength for his condition.

He was vomiting copious amounts of green, watery material with some mucus. He urinated frequently and the urine as voided contained a bright ted pigment which turned to brown, coffee-color on standing. The chest was clear to percussion and suscultation. The spleen and liver were 4fb below the costal margin, enlarged and slightly tender. There was slight pain over the costo-vertebral angles to pressure. The extremities were cold and there was slight perspiration on the brow. The pulse was of fair quality. Blood pressure 118/60. The rest of the physical examination was essentially normal. Complete blood count on admission: v Hgb 20%. RBC 750,000, WBC 2,400, Bands 8, Segs 48, Monos 2, Basos 1. Recheck: RBC 880,000,HGB 10-20%.

He was given atabrine dihydrochloride, 0.2 gms., intramuscularly at 1900, on 11-21-42 and 0500, on 11-22-42. 300 cc of wholevblood, 1,000 c.c. of 10% glucose and 4% sodium bicarbonate in normal saline were given at 2000, 11-21-42. He had a moderate reaction immediately after the transfusion, controlled by routine measures.

A second transfusion of 300 c.c. of whole blood was given at 0830, November 22nd and 500 c.c. of 10% glucose in normal saline at 1430. He was relieved of symptoms and able to take liquid nourishment. But his course was rapidly down-hill in spite of palliative treatment. Respirations became more rapid and shallower. He lost consciousness at 1830 and stopped breathing at 1855.

INSTRUCTIONS.

(See Manual for Medical Department, par. 3428.)

- 1. Forward in duplicate, except in the case of an officer, when triplicate is required. Keep file copy, and in a fleet send additional copy to commander in chief.
- 2. "Appointed" refers to the case of an officer. "Enlisted" refers to all enlisted personnel. For other cases leave this space blank.
- 3. "Disposition of remains" refers to the disposition of the body from the ship or station to which the deceased was attached. Do not hold the form until the final disposition or place of interment is known.
- 4. The cause of death shall be accurately determined and all means available and necessary for this purpose should be used. Attention is called to the duty of medical officers to make post-mortem examinations under certain conditions. (See Manual, par. 2925.)
- 5. The cause of death, both primary and contributory, should be stated in the terms of the Nomenclature of Diseases and Injuries, with the appropriate diagnosis number and key letter (in case of an injury).
- 6. Whenever two or more morbid conditions enter in the causation of a death, particular care should be exercised in determining the primary cause of death. In general, the disease of the longest duration is the primary cause of death. Examples: In case of measles followed by broncho-pneumonia, measles is the primary and broncho-pneumonia contributory (secondary) cause of death. Appendicitis, acute, followed by peritonitis, acute, general; appendicitis, acute, is the primary cause. Many combinations of diseases, however, will be exceptions to this rule. One of the following principles may then be applicable.
- (a) Any one of the chief infective diseases should be considered primary to any other cause of death. Example: Scarlet fever and cholelithiasis; scarlet fever is the primary cause of death.
- (b) If one of the diseases is much more frequently fatal than the other, then it should usually be considered the primary cause of death. Example: Cancer and broncho-pneumonia; cancer is the primary cause of death.
- (c) If one of the diseases is acute and the other chronic, the acute disease should usually be considered the primary cause of death. Example: Ulcer of stomach and pneumonia lobar, the latter is the primary cause of death.
- (d) Violent causes, such as injuries and poisonings, should be considered primary to other causes. Examples: Typhoid fever and fracture of skull, the latter is the primary cause of death. Syphilis and poisoning by arsenic, the latter is the primary cause of death.
- 7. The "Summary of facts relative to the death" shall contain (1) essential evidence concerning the origin (line of duty, misconduct) of the disability causing death; (2) important diagnostic data ante-mortem and post-mortem (if a post-mortem examination is made); (3) character and date of operations; (4) duration and principal points in the course of the fatal disease and other facts supporting the statement of cause of death.
- 8. When retired officers or transferred fleet naval reservists die while under the care of a naval medical officer a statement must be made that the disease "is" or "is not" in the line of duty.

Patient was admitted to this hospital from Corregidor P.I., on July 2, 1942, with diagnosis of arteriosclerotic-hypertensive heart disease and chronic malaria. Placed on maintenance dose of digitalis and quinine therapy. Patient was semi-ambulatory for the following year with occasional mild episodes of decompensation, until July 14, 1943, when he suddenly developed an acute enterocolitis with a fever of 104°F. Stools were negative for ova and parasites; positive for occult blood. WBC 9,200 with a marked shift to the left. Examination revealed at this time an emaciated 62 year old white male, acutely ill. Many moist rales in lungs posteriorly, heart enh rged, rate rapid and irregular with a pulse deficit of 60, mass size of plum palpable in mid abdomen and fixed, pitting edema of ankles. Placedon sulfathiazole and later sulfaguanidine with no improvement. Egg nog diet and large doses of bismuth failed to control the diarrhea. Digitalis therapy from the onset failed to control heart rate. Repeated stool examinations were negative for ova and parasites but showed small amounts of pus, and occult blood. There was a gradual decline in patients condition until he died at 2228 on July 20, 1943.

SUMMARY OF FACTS RELATIVE TO DEATH:  Box 346, Brunswick, Ohio.

Admitted from the Japanese Prison Work Camp, Las Pinas, P.I., on January 22, 1944. History of chronic malaria which was contracted in September, 1942. The last recurrence was in October, 1943. Recurring diarrhea with blood, mucus and pus in the stools, since April, 1942, associated with soreness of the mouth and tongue. He has been unable to work for the past five weeks due to recurrence of diarrhea, irregular fever and weakness.

Physical examination on admission revealed a very pale, emaciated and critically ill white male. Pulse rate 100, regular and weak. Temperature normal. Tongue pale and mucosa atrophic. Generalized tenderness of the lower abdomen. Tendon reflexes hyperactive.

Examination of a stained blood smear disclosed an unclassified type of plasmodium. The erythrocytes numbered 1,600,000 per cubic millimeter, and there were 3,600 leucocytes per cubic millimeter. Stool specimens contained the ova of hookworm, pus, blood and mucus, but no ameba.

Patient was placed under supportive and symptomatic treatment, including intravenous infusions of whole blood, human plasma, and solutions of dextrose in normal saline. Quinine therapy for malaria was instituted.

Following the blood transfusions, he improved somewhat. Diarrhea persisted, however, with marked weakness and irregular fever characteristic of the algid form of malaria. He died at 0610, January 29, 1944.

Autopsy performed. Findings are as follows:

- 1. Acute ulcerative colitis, cecum and descending colon.
- 2. Hookworm infestation, duodenum and jejunum.
- 3. Chronic fibrous splenitis (chronic malaria).
- 4. Early fibrosis of liver.
- 5. Marked secondary anemia.
- 6. Acute dilatation of heart.
- 7. Atelectasis of both lungs, grade III.
- 8. Atrophy, both adrenals.
- 9. Atherosolerosis, aorta, grade II.
- 10. Widespread mucosal atrophy of gastro-intestinal tract (Pellagra).

SUMMARY OF FACTS RELATIVE TO DEATH: Admitted to this hospita	1 on March 6, 1844, from Cabanatuan, P.I. History of pain in left shoulder and enlargement of left axillary lymphnodes, onset June 1942. Swelling of left arm and increased pain in left shoulder since January 1944. Physical examination at that time revealed a poorly nourished 46 year old white male suffering from an apparent malignancy in the region of the left shoulder. There was marked pitting edema of the left forearm and hand with large firm palpable nodes in the left axilla, the left supra-clavicular area and extending up the left side of the neck. There was dependent edema of both lawer extremities with a moderate ascites and edema of the abdominal wall. There was deformity of the left clavicle with a forward drooping of the shoulder as a result of an old fracture nine years ago. This was now healed in malposition. The remainder of the physical examination was essentially negative. Fluoroscopic examination of the left shoulder and arm was negative except for the mal-union of the left clavidle. A fluoroscopic examination of the gastro-intestinal tract after a barium meal revealed no evidence of pathology. On March 18, 1944, under local anesthesia, a portion of one of the enlarged nodes on the left side of the neck was removed and sent to the Philippine General Hospital for biopsy study. On April 27, 1944, this was reported by telephone as Hougkin's Sarcoma. The general condition of this patient grew steadily worse because of persistent vomiting. While his condition permitted he was given X-ray therapy from the only possible source, a portable X-ray unit. To this he responded by a reduction in the size of the glands in the neck and axilla, and a decrease in pain. His general condition continued to grow worse and he died at 1630, July 17, 1944.

The patient had been one of a number of prisoners of war on a v ship was attacked by a flight of planes, and the ship was sunk.	After spending several hours in the water he was ploked up, as one of the survivors, by	v a small fishing vessel.

While enroute to Manila, P.I. on September 22, 1944, the vesse	l was strafed by planes and he sustained compound supracondylar fractures of both femurs.
On arrival at this hospital at 0230 September 24, 1944, the pat	ient was in poor general condition. He was dehydrated and showed numerous skin lesions	of pellagra. The area of the wounds just above the knees was swollen and tense, especial	ly on the left. There was no palpable pulse in the dorsalis pedis or posterior tibial art	eries on the left; the leg and foot were cold and only a trace of motion was possible in t	he toes. The patient did not complain of pain and stated the left foot was numb. The ri	ght foot did not show these signs. Blood pressure 90/60. He was given a spinal anesthesia	of 100 mg. of pro caine, and 3/8 grain e hedrine, hypodermically. His wounds were clean	sed but not opened and Kirschner wires were placed in the tioial crests for skeletal to	raction. Traction was applied in bed and 1000 c.c. of 5% glucose in saline given intr	avenously. His condition fair throughout the day, but there was no indication of a retur	n of the pulse in the left foot.
He repeatedly requested the bed pan but had no results. At 180	one was given an enema and still no results. He appeared slightly more toxic pulse ab	of the left fewer should

SUMMARY OF FACTS RELATIVE TO DEATH: This patient was bro	ought to this camp on the night

SUMMARY OF FACTS RELATIVE TO DEATH: This patient was brought to this camp on the night of September 23, 1944. History of exposure and exhaustion following the sinking, by aerial attack, of a Japanese prison ship, on which he was being transported, in the China Sea, near Manila, P.I., on September 21, 1944. On the following day, he appeared extremely ill and was admitted to a hospital ward.

Examination disclosed marked cyanosis and dyspaea; pulse 140 per minute; and, temperature 103 degrees Fahrenheit. Signs of inflammatory consolidation of lower lobe, left lung, and the middle and lower lobes of the right lung, were present. He displayed edema of a pitting character in ankles, legs and shoulders.

White blood count on admission was 700. He gave no history of previous medications. Malarial smear was negative. He was given a transfusion of 400 c.c. of whole blood by the indirect method on the day of admission. This was repeated on September 28, and 27, 1944. Sulfathiazole, two grams with one gram every four hours for first 24 hours was given; followed by one gram every six hours for next 24 hours. It was then discontinued in as much as resolution had begun and the white blood count had failed to increase with transfusions. With the beginning of resolution of the pulmonary process he began to expectorate copicus amounts of purulent, blood tinged sputum. This was found to be teeming with organisms, morphologically characteristic of pneumococci.

In spite of beginning resolution, and all available supportive treatment the patient continued to become weaker, more symmetric and dysponeic. No oxygen therapy, anti-pneumococci sera or pentnucleotide were available.

At 8:40 P.M. September 27, 1944, the patient ceased to breath and heart action stopped.
